

Improve Your Interpersonal Communications Skills

This is an advanced communication training delivered in an action packed workshop format.

It will teach you a unique set of some of the finest communication patterns and skills used by outstanding communicators.

Packed with skill building exercises and fun round robin sessions, this seminar allows participants to actually practice new skills and improve them throughout the training.

This training is for any team or group who want to improve their communication. It is especially effective for people from the same team, section or department of an organization, who communicate with each other regularly.

Unlike the majority of communication seminars in which the trainer simply lists things people should do - this workshop is a dynamic day of practice.

New patterns and ways of interacting are PRACTICED by each participant in small groups over and over again all day long. Long winded lecture is avoided and replaced with an active learning process.

At the end of the day, participants have actually honed and practiced new ways of speaking, listening, clarifying, back tracking, creating rapport, summarizing outcomes, re-directing conversations towards a solution or outcome, resolving confusion and misunderstandings and much more.

Participants come away with an entirely new level of communication skill and many will have actually changed one or two of their most limiting interpersonal communication habits during the training.

Office teams and interpersonal relationships have often resolved issues in this workshop that have been plaguing them for years and were preventing them from attaining a higher degree of productivity. Many participants have commented that the potential of their team feels more attainable because of this seminar.

